About the European Youth Energy Network (EYEN)

Placing youth at the heart of the European energy transition

The European Youth Energy Network (EYEN) is the first and only federation uniting and representing energy-focused youth organisations in Europe. We reshape youth engagement towards a just, empowered and collaborative European energy transition. To achieve that, we will be working on implementing our five strategic objectives in the spheres of: advocacy, coordination, connection, empowerment and education.

Some of the things we accomplished since we started building up the federation in 2020: we built a team and our first project to enable engagement in policymaking, hosted sessions at big international conferences like the Clean Energy Ministerial and COP26, co-developed the Youth Shaping the Climate Pact policy paper on "Gaps and ideas for youth engagement", co-organised the second European Youth Energy Day as part of the European Sustainable Energy Week (EUSEW) after enabling the first, got officially established, met our team members & friends at our first big gathering in Brussels, created ties with institutions and became part of international youth engagement mechanisms. We have been expanding our membership base, strategising & so much more!
